

1 TRACY L. WILKISON
Acting United States Attorney
2 BRANDON D. FOX
Assistant United States Attorney
3 Chief, Criminal Division
MACK E. JENKINS (Cal. Bar No. 242101)
4 Assistant United States Attorney
Chief, Public Corruption & Civil Rights Section
5 VERONICA DRAGALIN (Cal. Bar No. 281370)
MELISSA MILLS (Cal. Bar No. 248529)
6 Assistant United States Attorneys
Public Corruption & Civil Rights Section
7 1500 United States Courthouse
312 North Spring Street
8 Los Angeles, California 90012
Telephone: (213) 894-2091
9 Facsimile: (213) 894-2927
Email: mack.jenkins@usdoj.gov
10 veronica.dragalin@usdoj.gov
melissa.mills@usdoj.gov
11

Attorneys for Plaintiff
12 UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

13 UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT

14 FOR THE CENTRAL DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

15 UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

16 Plaintiff,

17 v.

18 MITCHELL ENGLANDER,

19 Defendant.

No. CR 20-35-JFW

GOVERNMENT'S SENTENCING POSITION
FOR DEFENDANT MITCHELL ENGLANDER;
DECLARATION OF MACK E. JENKINS;
EXHIBIT

[Exhibit 2 concurrently lodged and filed under seal]

Hearing Date: January 25, 2021

Hearing Time: 8:00 a.m.

Location: Courtroom of the Hon. John F. Walter

23
24 Plaintiff United States of America, by and through its counsel 25 of record, the United States Attorney for the Central District of 26 California and Assistant United States Attorneys Mack E. Jenkins, 27 Veronica Dragalin, and Melissa Mills, hereby files its Sentencing 28

1 Position for Defendant Mitchell Englander in the above-captioned 2 case.

3 The government's Sentencing Position is based upon the attached
4 memorandum of points and authorities, Declaration of Mack E. Jenkins
5 and attached Exhibit 1, the concurrently lodged under seal Exhibit 2, 6 the files and records in this case, the Presentence Investigation 7 Report, the Recommendation Letter, and such further evidence and 8 argument as the Court may permit.

9 Dated: January 11, 2021

Respectfully submitted,

10 TRACY L. WILKISON
11 Acting United States Attorney

12 BRANDON D. FOX
13 Assistant United States Attorney
14 Chief, Criminal Division

15
16 MACK E. JENKINS
17 VERONICA DRAGALIN
18 MELISSA MILLS
19 Assistant United States Attorneys
20 Attorneys for Plaintiff
21 UNITED STATES OF AMERICA
22
23
24
25
26
27
28

Table of Contents

I.	INTRODUCTION.....	1
II.	STATEMENT OF FACTS.....	2
III.	THE PRESENTENCE INVESTIGATION REPORT.....	7
IV.	GOVERNMENT'S SENTENCING RECOMMENDATION.....	10
A.	Nature and circumstances of the offense(s) warrant a meaningful custodial sentence.....	11
B.	General Deterrence Is Paramount in Public Corruption Cases.....	13
1.	A lenient sentence here would embolden, rather than deter, future crime.....	15
2.	Specific deterrence also compels a custodial sentence.....	16
C.	Need to reflect the seriousness of the offense, to promote respect for the law, and to provide just punishment for the offense.....	18
D.	History and characteristics of the defendant are both aggravating and mitigating.....	19
1.	Defendant had many choices; he chose poorly many times.....	21
2.	Community support for a public official involved in a corruption related offense is of limited mitigation value.....	22
3.	Defendant's prompt guilty plea is a mitigating factor.....	23
E.	A lenient sentence will necessarily create unwarranted sentencing disparities with less-culpable defendants who do not enjoy the same status as defendant.....	23
V.	CONCLUSION.....	25

Table of Authorities

Page (s)

Cases

Gall v. United States, 552 U.S. 38 (2007).....	10
United States v. Bistline, 665 F.3d 758 (6th Cir. 2012).....	20
United States v. Bragg, 582 F.3d 965 (9th Cir. 2009).....	9
United States v. Brown, 880 F.3d 399 (7th Cir. 2018).....	14
United States v. Kuhlman, 711 F.3d 1321 (11th Cir. 2013).....	16, 20
United States v. Livesay, 587 F.3d 1274 (11th Cir. 2009).....	16
United States v. Martin, 455 F.3d 1227 (11th Cir. 2006).....	15
United States v. Morgan, 635 F. App'x 423 (10th Cir. 2015).....	12, 14, 18, 22
United States v. Mueffelman, 470 F.3d 33 (1st Cir. 2006).....	9, 14
United States v. Prosperi, 686 F.3d 32 (1st Cir. 2012).....	20
United States v. Saeteurn, 504 F.3d 1175 (9th Cir. 2007).....	24
United States v. Stefonek, 179 F.3d 1030 (7th Cir. 1999).....	9, 20
United States v. Treadwell, 593 F.3d 990 (9th Cir. 2010).....	8, 9
United States v. Vrdolyak, 593 F.3d 676 (7th Cir. 2010).....	22

Statutes

18 U.S.C. § 371.....	24
----------------------	----

1 18 U.S.C. § 1001..... 11, 24

2 18 U.S.C. § 1503..... 24

3 28 U.S.C. § 994 (d) ..... 20

4 Sentencing Guidelines

5 U.S.S.G. § 2B1.1..... 7, 24

6 U.S.S.G. § 2J1.2..... 24

7 U.S.S.G. § 5H1.2..... 20

MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

I. INTRODUCTION

Defendant Mitchell Englander was a powerful and wealthy Los Angeles City Councilmember who swore an oath to serve the interests of his constituents. He swore another oath as a reserve officer with the Los Angeles Police Department to uphold and protect the law. Instead, defendant illicitly cashed in on his status as a purported public servant in casino bathrooms and through VIP bottle service, luxury dinners, and behind hotel room doors. Over numerous incidents of escalating corruption and self-preservation, defendant sold out both oaths, cheaply and repeatedly. After resigning in the middle of his term after he was questioned in the instant investigation, defendant successfully parlayed his government service into a lucrative private practice position as a government consultant with a major entertainment company.

Through his continued corrupt conduct, defendant betrayed his oath to serve the public and betrayed his oath to uphold the law; moreover, defendant did so in a manner that caused a stain not just on him but also on City government and the LAPD. The effect was to further sever an already fraying trust of the defendant's constituents in those crucial City institutions. Particularly aggravating, defendant engaged in this pervasive wrongdoing not for any urgent need or as the result of any aberrant life circumstance - he was motivated by plain old-fashioned greed, selfishness, and a desperate desire to cling to his status as a wealthy and powerful City official. After being provided numerous opportunities to come clean and live up to his oaths, defendant unapologetically chose to do the opposite each and every time. It was not until facing federal

1 indictment on seven charges, each supported by overwhelming evidence, 2 that defendant finally dropped his crumbling veneer and agreed to 3 admit essentially all of the facts the government alleged against 4 him.

5 For his pattern of coolly calculated criminality and trampled 6 public trust that defendant leaves in his wake -- which will cause
7 lasting civic damage by undermining the City's faith in its public 8 servants -- a meaningful term of imprisonment is warranted. The 9 government respectfully recommends that the Court impose the 10 following sentence: (a) 24 months' imprisonment; (b) three years'
11 supervised release; (c) a $45,000 fine; (d) 300 hours of community 12 service; and (e) a special assessment of $100.

13 II. STATEMENT OF FACTS

14 In the summer of 2017, the U.S. Attorney's Office and FBI were 15 engaged in an expansive inquiry into corruption within the City of 16 Los Angeles. The investigation focused primarily on corrupt 17 relationships between City officials, their proxies, and real estate 18 developers and their proxies, including foreign nationals and 19 entities. It also examined the City system that empowered certain 20 City officials to wield outsized influence on the business decisions 21 of, particularly, real estate and related companies. A key focus of 22 the government was close review of the required Statement of Economic 23 Interest - Form 700 for numerous City officials. The California Fair 24 Political Practices Commission mandates important financial 25 disclosures via the Form 700 as a means to monitor City officials' 26 financial relationships, and their public disclosure is intended to 27 deter cultivating corrupt relationships. (CR 1 "Indictment" ¶ 4.)
28 However, because it relies entirely on the candor of the reporting

1 official, it is a check that is easy to evade and difficult to 2 enforce.

3 In June 2017, defendant was an elected City Councilmember 4 representing Council District 12 in the San Fernando Valley. He 5 served as the Council President Pro-Tempore and was a member of 6 several powerful committees, including the Planning and Land Use 7 Management ("PLUM") Committee. Defendant was also a reserve member 8 of the LAPD. (PSR ¶¶ 7-8.) As an elected public official, defendant 9 had a duty to prioritize loyalty to his constituents, the laws, and 10 ethical principles above private gain. As a law enforcement officer, 11 he took an oath to uphold the law. Between June 2017 and his arrest 12 in March 2020, defendant repeatedly breached this duty and oath.

13 In June 2017, defendant accepted benefits from a businessperson
14 on trips in Las Vegas and Palm Springs, including a total of $15,000 15 in cash inside casino bathrooms on two separate occasions, hotel
16 accommodations, an extravagant meal, approximately $34,000 in bottle 17 service at a nightclub, and escort services sent to defendant's hotel
18 room. Other public officials accompanied defendant on the Las Vegas 19 trip, including a high-ranking member of defendant's staff and George 20 Esparza, a staffer for Jose Huizar, who was a fellow City
21 councilmember and chair of the PLUM Committee. (PSR ¶¶ 9-13.) Days 22 after these trips, defendant agreed to and did arrange for the 23 businessperson to meet a developer to promote his business. (PSR 24 ¶ 14.)

25 Defendant's first violation of the public's trust occurred when 26 he accepted the financial benefits provided by Businessperson A. Any 27 reasonable private citizen would think twice before accepting $15,000
28 in cold cash without a purpose. One would certainly have to question

1 whether such a generous "gift" could, in return, leave the recipient 2 vulnerable to distasteful requests or demands in the future. That 3 potential was heightened given defendant's position as an elected 4 official bound by certain laws and ethical requirements. By 5 accepting cash from a businessperson with no personal ties to him and 6 seeking business favors, defendant opened himself up to improper 7 influence and potential blackmail. He violated ethics rules by 8 failing to report the lavish gifts on his Form 700. (PSR ¶ 30.)
9 Defendant's willingness to ingratiate himself with a businessperson 10 who wanted something from him -- something that defendant could 11 provide -- and who provided him lavish gifts was the start of a 12 concerning and predictable relationship. In the government's view, 13 the evidence shows it likely would have blossomed into federal 14 bribery had law enforcement not intervened, and had the 15 businessperson not made the choice to accept accountability and 16 cooperate in the federal investigation.

17 By August 2017, defendant learned that the FBI was investigating 18 the Las Vegas trip. (CR 24 ¶ 9; PSR ¶ 16.) After learning of the 19 federal investigation, defendant engaged in a campaign of false 20 statements, obstruction, and witness tampering that repeatedly 21 violated his duties and responsibilities as an elected official and 22 member of law enforcement. Defendant's obstruction campaign was 23 calculated, extensive in scope and duration, and designed to mislead 24 investigators at every turn through multiple means.

25 Shortly after learning about the investigation, defendant 26 created a document to mislead investigators. Although months had 27 passed since the June 1, 2017 trip and defendant had since met with 28 Businessperson A on at least two occasions without offering to 1 reimburse any expenses, he sent a reimbursement check to 2 Businessperson A only after learning that the FBI was asking 3 questions, and backdated the check to give the impression he intended 4 to reimburse the expenses before the FBI reached out to request an 5 interview. (PSR ¶¶ 13-16.)

6 By October 4, 2017, defendant had learned that the FBI had 7 interviewed three witnesses from the Las Vegas trip: Businessperson
8 A, City Staffer B, and George Esparza. (PSR ¶ 17.) Defendant began 9 coordinating his story with other witnesses, including by meeting
10 with City Staffer B and by telling Businessperson A what City Staffer
11 B had been asked and how he responded to FBI questioning. (Id.)

12 Defendant had more than one month to consider the choice he 13 would make when the FBI asked him questions. He hired prominent 14 attorneys to counsel him and had weeks to consider his options when 15 confronted with a difficult choice. (PSR ¶¶ 16, 18.) Defendant 16 could have come clean about accepting $15,000 in cash from a 17 businessperson who had suspicious dealings with multiple public 18 officials in Los Angeles, which would have helped federal 19 investigators uncover public corruption. Or defendant could have 20 simply exercised his right not to speak with the FBI. Instead, he 21 made the wrong choice at every turn.

22 Over the course of 18 months, defendant spoke to federal 23 investigators on three separate occasions and repeatedly espoused 24 false statements to cover up his unethical behavior and his 25 increasingly criminal conduct. (PSR ¶¶ 18, 25, 33-36.) Defendant's 26 last FBI interview, on December 31, 2018, occurred less than two 27 months after the FBI executed widely publicized search warrants at 28 Jose Huizar's residence and City offices. Armed with personal

1 knowledge that a corrupt businessperson who had ties to Huizar's 2 staffer had also provided $15,000 in cash to defendant, he still 3 chose to mislead investigators by lying about his own receipt of 4 gifts from this individual. (PSR ¶¶ 33-36.)

5 Defendant did not stop at repeatedly lying to federal agents and 6 prosecutors. His attempts to thwart the investigation and cover his 7 tracks escalated over time, employing obstructionist tactics in a 8 calculated campaign to keep investigators from learning the truth
9 about his conduct. Defendant used encrypted and disappearing 10 messages to coordinate his story with another witness, and then he 11 lied to the FBI about ever using that messaging service at all. (PSR 12 ¶¶ 15, 19, 20, 22, 26, 36.) He urged Businessperson A to use a 13 different phone number when discussing the FBI, demonstrating a 14 concern that their phones were being tapped and a calculated intent 15 to avoid detection. (PSR ¶ 20.) Defendant changed a meeting 16 location at the last minute, "turned up the car stereo volume" and 17 "drove in circles around the block" while directing Businessperson A 18 on how to respond to FBI questions, again demonstrating an attempt to 19 avoid law enforcement surveillance and listening devices.<sup>1</sup> (PSR 20 ¶ 27.)

21 Most egregiously, defendant was caught red-handed on recordings 22 attempting to repeatedly tamper with a witness in the federal 23 investigation. He brazenly directed Businessperson A how to answer
24

---

25
26 <sup>1</sup> As can be heard on the audio recording, when Businessperson A 27 first entered defendant's car, the radio was not on and defendant 28 spoke at a normal volume when exchanging innocuous greetings.
However, he then turned on the radio and turned up the volume and lowered his voice to a whisper right when he stated, "so I met with them again," referring to his FBI interview five days earlier. See Exhibit 2 at 00:00-00:32 (concurrently lodged under seal).

1 questions from the FBI, what information to withhold, and how to lie
2 to the FBI. See, e.g., PSR ¶ 25(e) (defendant told Businessperson A 3 "what questions to expect, what to say, and what not say during the 4 interviews"), ¶ 27 ("we never had a conversation ... don't mention it 5 at all"); Exhibits 1-2. Defendant repeatedly portrayed himself as 6 someone knowledgeable about how investigators would approach the 7 interview. (PSR ¶¶ 22, 28, 32.) Only after being confronted with 8 irrefutable evidence of his crimes - which included recordings of his 9 own words - did defendant finally admit he "counseled Businessperson
10 A how to lie to and mislead the FBI and USAO." (CR 24 ¶ 8.)

11 Between his last interview in December 2018 and his arrest in 12 March 2020, defendant had time to reflect on his actions, his past 13 choices, and the way he betrayed the citizens he was elected to 14 represent, his fellow public servants who serve with honor and 15 integrity, and his fellow law enforcement officers who uphold the law 16 even in difficult circumstances. After leaving public service early 17 with two years left in his elected term, defendant used his public 18 platform to secure a lucrative career in private practice without 19 ever correcting the multiple false statements that he had made to 20 investigators in an attempt to protect himself and his earning 21 potential. The citizens of Los Angeles expect and deserve more from 22 their elected officials and public servants.

23 III. THE PRESENTENCE INVESTIGATION REPORT

24 On December 21, 2020, the USPO disclosed the PSR and its 25 recommendation letter. (CR 39 "PSR Ltr."; CR 40.) The USPO found 26 that defendant's total offense level was 4, based on a base offense
27 level of 6 under U.S.S.G. § 2B1.1, and no additional specific offense 28 characteristics or adjustments. The government concurs with the

1 USPO's calculation of Criminal History Category I. With respect to 2 imprisonment, the USPO recommended the lowest possible sentence of no 3 custody and three years of probation. However, the USPO also found 4 that the factors called for the high-end of the fine range and 5 recommended a $9,500 fine along with a $100 special assessment.<sup>2</sup> 6 (PSR Ltr.) The USPO recommended no community service. The 7 government objected to the USPO's Guidelines calculations and 8 calculated the total Guidelines offense level to be 15 (CR 41 "Gov't 9 Objections"), resulting in a Guidelines range of 18 to 24 months' 10 imprisonment and a fine range of $7,500 to $75,000. U.S.S.G.
11 § 5E1.2. As the PSR notes, defendant agreed not to appeal the 12 Court's sentence provided it does not exceed 36 months' imprisonment; 13 the government agreed not to appeal provided defendant is sentenced 14 to at least 18 months' custody. (PSR ¶ 4; CR 24 "Plea Agreement" 15 ¶¶ 14-15).

16 As previewed in its objections (Gov't Objections at 1 fn.1), the 17 _____

18 <sup>2</sup> No justification for this lopsided recommendation is offered 19 or apparent. Absent any explanation to the contrary, it stands to 20 reason that whatever the USPO's rationale may be for recommending a 21 sentence at the high end of the applicable guideline for a fine in 22 this case, it would similarly compel a recommendation for a sentence 23 of high-end imprisonment. Otherwise, this apparent disparity would 24 operate to afford defendant – a former City Councilman and law
25 enforcement officer with financial means, influence, and name 26 recognition – the advantage of paying more money in order to avoid 27 serving prison time that would otherwise be warranted under the 28 overall sentencing framework. Any such bias, whether implicit or otherwise, favoring wealthy and powerful defendants over defendants without substantial resources or influence is not consistent with justice and the Guidelines. See United States v. Treadwell, 593 F.3d 990, 1012-13 (9th Cir. 2010). As outlined below, this disparate treatment seems interwoven throughout the USPO's support for its probationary recommendation.

1 government also respectfully submits that the USPO improperly 2 analyzed the § 3553(a) factors. More concerning, by 3 disproportionately emphasizing certain mitigating factors, 4 incorrectly relying on speculative collateral consequences, and 5 ignoring or minimizing other aggravating factors and required
6 statutory factors, the proffered analysis results in a two-tier
7 system of justice - a more flexible and lenient one for white-collar 8 defendants, and a more rigid and severe one for "other" criminals.
9 As detailed at length below, courts across the country have rejected 10 this dichotomy as inconsistent with fundamental fairness and the 11 statutory goals of sentencing. See Treadwell, 593 F.3d at 1012-13 12 (overruled on other grounds) (rejecting the principle that a 13 defendant of means should be afforded a lower prison sentence to 14 enable him to pay restitution to his fraud victims, and noting the 15 critical importance of "the minimization of discrepancies between 16 white- and blue-collar offenses, and limits on the ability of those 17 with money or earning potential to buy their way out of jail") 18 (quoting United States v. Mueffelman, 470 F.3d 33, 40 (1st Cir.
19 2006)); United States v. Stefonek, 179 F.3d 1030, 1038 (7th Cir.
20 1999) (white-collar criminals are "not to be treated more leniently 21 than members of the 'criminal class'").

22 While it is certainly true that various § 3353(a) factors can be 23 weighted differently by reasonable minds, the law requires they not 24 be weighed to unjustly favor certain classes of defendants and 25 disfavor others; furthermore, no factors should be omitted from the 26 balancing. See United States v. Bragg, 582 F.3d 965, 969 (9th Cir.
27 2009) ("The very broad discretion of district judges in sentencing 28 post-Booker does not extend to ignoring sentencing factors mandated

1 by statute."); Gall v. United States, 552 U.S. 38, 49-50, (2007)
2 (district judges are required to "consider all of the § 3553(a)
3 factors to determine whether they support the sentence requested by a 4 party") (emphasis added). Unfortunately, the USPO's § 3553(a)
5 analysis suffers both these infirmities.

6 IV. GOVERNMENT'S SENTENCING RECOMMENDATION

7 It is inescapable that this case is, at its core, borne from 8 corruption. Public corruption is not a victimless crime.<sup>3</sup> 9 Obstruction of justice and witness tampering by a public official and 10 LAPD reserve officer are not victimless crimes, even where the 11 witness is an FBI source. More than ever, when a public official is 12 revealed to have cashed in on his oath, lied to federal agents to 13 protect his career and image, and endeavored to corrupt others
14 through obstruction, the harm to the public's trust in its government 15 is deeply and lastingly affected. Adding to the import of this case, 16 uncovering this type of conduct is often exceptionally difficult and 17 takes years of dedicated investigation. Moreover, success of these 18 investigations often hinges on a conspirator actually taking 19 accountability for their actions and agreeing to cooperate. For 20 example, had Businessperson A ultimately not elected to come clean, 21 it is highly likely that defendant's conduct would have gone 22 undetected and his lies would have been rewarded. Attempts to 23 minimize the core corruption conduct here or disconnect it from its 24

---

25
26 <sup>3</sup> See, e.g., Divoungy, O. and Hill, B., "Corruption Costs 27 Illinois Taxpayers at Least $550M Per Year" (discussing how not only 28 does corruption lessen residents' faith in the government, it decreases economic growth and disincentivizes investments in the state), available at <https://www.illinoispolicy.org/reports/corruption-costs-illinois-taxpayers-at-least-550m-per-year/>.

1 resultant public harm are refuted by the facts and otherwise do a 2 disservice to the statutory goals of sentencing.

3 The government respectfully requests that the Court adopt the 4 factual findings and criminal history calculation of the PSR in this 5 matter (subject to the objections lodged by the government at CR 41), 6 and the additional factual information in this sentencing position.
7 Defendant's total offense level should be 15. However, regardless of 8 the final Guidelines calculation, the government's recommended 9 sentence is grounded in a balancing of the aggravating and mitigating 10 § 3553(a) factors, as set forth below. In accordance with the 11 § 3553(a) factors and the foregoing, the government recommends that 12 the Court impose the following sentence: (a) 24 months of 13 imprisonment; (b) three years of supervised release; (c) $45,000
14 fine;<sup>4</sup> (d) 300 hours of community service;<sup>5</sup> and (e) a special 15 assessment of $100.

16 A. Nature and circumstances of the offense(s) warrant a
17 meaningful custodial sentence

18 Contrary to the USPO's conclusion that this was a "relatively 19 simple" offense, this was not a run-of-the-mill violation of 18

---

20 <sup>4</sup> The government calculates the fine range as $7,500 to $75,000 21 based on an offense level 15. U.S.S.G. § 5E1.2. $45,000 represents 22 three times the $15,000 in cash defendant was unjustly enriched by 23 Businessperson A (not accounting for the other thousands defendant 24 accepted as gifts in Las Vegas and at various dinners) and is 25 slightly above the mid-range of the Guidelines. The government 26 believes the weight of the sentence should be focused on the 27 custodial term but with a significant fine added to support the 28 overall sentence and address the financial gain to defendant by his conduct. The PSR supports defendant's ability to pay a fine in this amount (at minimum, by the end of his supervised release term).

<sup>5</sup> Given the obstacles defendant overcame from his childhood and his work in the public sector, and given that he works from home as a consultant and thus maintains a flexible schedule, he seems a prime candidate for a sentence including community service. He can help others avoid the mistakes he made and give back to the community whose trust he violated.

1 U.S.C. § 1001. Far from it. The PSR itself refutes its own
2 dismissive description as the offense conduct here spans 30
3 paragraphs of the PSR, not including numerous subparagraphs. (PSR 4 ¶¶ 6-36.) As a reserve LAPD law enforcement officer himself - a 5 background that most 1001 defendants inarguably lack - defendant knew 6 how critical it was for law enforcement to interview witnesses and 7 obtain truthful statements from witnesses. He knew that his truthful 8 statements would be valuable information and would help uncover 9 corrupt conduct by a businessperson who provided concealed benefits 10 to elected and public officials and corrupt conduct by those 11 officials who accepted said benefits. Defendant also knew that his 12 false statements would hinder the FBI's investigation; indeed, that 13 was his goal. Even private citizens are expected to provide truthful 14 information in connection with a federal investigation. Private 15 citizens are often called upon to give statements and testify to 16 ensure that criminals are prosecuted and convicted in order to 17 protect the public. Of course, when a witness occupies a position of 18 trust such as law enforcement or elected office, this expectation is 19 significantly heightened.

20 When faced with sentencing conduct that adversely impacts public 21 trust in the fairness and integrity of government, also "at stake is 22 the collective reputation of all elected officials, particularly 23 those at the pinnacle of power and prestige. What happens when that 24 public trust is abused by corrupt acts? The offender's reputation is 25 sullied and with it the reputation of honest and stalwart public 26 servants. The judicial response to demonstrated corruption by the 27 political elite and the lapse of duty, honor, and integrity it
28 represents is as important as the corruption itself. United States

1 v. Morgan, 635 F. App'x 423, 447 (10th Cir. 2015) (reversing district 2 court and finding sentence of probation unreasonable in public 3 corruption case of state senator).

4 The PSR Letter addresses defendant's criminal conduct in a 5 cursory paragraph that apparently draws no connection between 6 defendant's public official status and the $15,000 in secret cash
7 that he accepted from a businessperson seeking to buy his influence.<sup>6</sup>
8 It does not analyze or even reference Businessperson A's critical 9 context to defendant's deceptive actions. In particular, it goes 10 unmentioned that "Businessperson A was seeking to increase his 11 business opportunities in the City. Among the ways Businessperson A 12 would accomplish this was to provide certain elected and other public 13 officials with" a sundry of illicit benefits. (Indictment ¶ 5.) The 14 PSR Letter does not address how many times defendant chose to lie, or 15 over what period of time; it does not address how many times he 16 attempted to tamper with a witness. These omissions undermine the 17 true harm and corrupt nature of the offenses defendant committed.
18 The nature and circumstances of the offenses conduct warrant a 19 meaningful custodial sentence.

20 B. General Deterrence Is Paramount in Public Corruption Cases

21 Courts have identified why general deterrence is uniquely 22

---

23
24 <sup>6</sup> Despite having a "related case" section in the PSR, the PSR 25 also overlooks that Businessperson A plays a prominent role in the 26 racketeering bribery scheme in related case United States v. Jose
27 Huizar, et al., 20-CR-326(A)-JFW. There, City Councilmember Jose 28 Huizar is alleged to have accepted a series of bribes and payments from Businessperson A as part of Businessperson A's attempt to use Huizar's City councilmember status to increase business opportunities. See CR 74, First Superseding Indictment, Overt Act
Nos. 301-333. The parallels of Businessperson A's role in the (admittedly more developed) bribery case against Huizar and his interactions with defendant here should not be ignored.

critical to public corruption crimes. "General deterrence comes from a probability of conviction and significant consequences. If either is eliminated or minimized, the deterrent effect is proportionately minimized. This country depends on honest representative democracy and, while our system is imperfect, it does not generally suffer from widespread corruption. Its proper functioning requires elected officials to serve the common good, not illicit personal gain. Our citizens place faith in the honesty and integrity of elected officials. Without meaningful consequences for a breach of trust, their trust is no more than blind trust." Morgan, 635 F. App'x 423, 450. By their nature, white-collar crimes are often difficult to detect; this makes enhanced general deterrence even more necessary. See United States v. Brown, 880 F.3d 399 (7th Cir. 2018) (district court did not err in relying on idea that white-collar criminals were prime candidates for general deterrence; district court was entitled to conclude that where there was a lower likelihood of getting caught, a serious penalty was necessary to ensure deterrence).

Congress has recognized that deterrence is a crucial factor in sentencing decisions for economic and public corruption crimes such as this one. See S.Rep. No. 98-225, at 76 (1983), reprinted in 1984 U.S.C.C.A.N. 3182, 3259 ("[A] purpose of sentencing is to deter others from committing the offense. This is particularly important in the area of white collar crime. Major white collar criminals often are sentenced to small fines and little or no imprisonment. Unfortunately, this creates the impression that certain offenses are punishable only by a small fine that can be written off as a cost of doing business."); United States v. Mueffelman, 470 F.3d 33, 40 (1st Cir. 2006) (recognizing importance of "the deterrence of white-collar

1 crime (of central concern to Congress), the minimization of 2 discrepancies between white-and blue-collar offenses, and limits on 3 the ability of those with money or earning potential to buy their way 4 out of jail").

5 Finally, not only is general deterrence a particularly critical 6 goal in sentencing white-collar defendants, importantly, courts have 7 recognized it is also a particularly effective sentencing tool in 8 such cases. This is because white collar criminals often premeditate 9 their crimes and engage in a cost-benefit analysis. See, e.g., 10 United States v. Martin, 455 F.3d 1227, 1240 (11th Cir. 2006)
11 ("Because economic and fraud based crimes are more rational, cool, 12 and calculated than sudden crimes of passion or opportunity, these 13 crimes are prime candidates for general deterrence. Defendants in 14 white collar crimes often calculate the financial gain and risk of 15 loss, and white collar crime therefore can be affected and reduced 16 with serious punishment."). Defendant's conduct here falls squarely
17 within the type of criminality Congress and courts target for general 18 deterrence.

- 19 1. A lenient sentence here would embolden, rather than 20 deter, future crime

21 As set forth above, one of the primary objectives of sentencing 22 elected officials is to make clear to other public officials that 23 abusing their position of trust and violating the law by profiting 24 off their position and obstructing justice are serious breaches of 25 their oath that carry with them a correspondingly serious punishment.
26 Imposing a lenient sentence in this case would send the opposite 27 message - it would encourage rather than discourage public officials 28 from obstructing public corruption probes by supporting a reasonable

1 conclusions that (1) they will face minimal criminal penalty if 2 caught, and (2) if they successfully obstruct, they will maintain 3 their political image, their power, and their pathway to a lucrative 4 future. In such a calculus, for those inclined toward corruption, 5 obstructing justice and committing crimes simply become a worthwhile 6 investment to maintain status as a public official and exploit it for 7 personal gain. This calculus cannot be endorsed in a functioning 8 democracy. Where that leniency drops to the level of a probationary 9 sentence notwithstanding the egregious facts of defendant's conduct 10 here, the failing is even more stark. "The threat of spending time on 11 probation simply does not, and cannot, provide the same level of 12 deterrence as can the threat of incarceration in a federal 13 penitentiary for a meaningful period of time." United States v.
14 Livesay, 587 F.3d 1274, 1279 (11th Cir. 2009); see also United States 15 v. Kuhlman, 711 F.3d 1321, 1328 (11th Cir. 2013) ("We are hard-16 pressed to see how a non-custodial sentence serves the goal of 17 general deterrence.").

18 2. Specific deterrence also compels a custodial sentence

19 While making no reference to general deterrence, the USPO 20 concludes that a probationary sentence will achieve specific 21 deterrence of defendant because he has support from family, friends, 22 community members, and other "positive influences in his life." (PSR 23 Ltr. at 3). The problem with this analysis is that it does not 24 address the fact that defendant enjoyed each of these positive 25 influences in his life throughout the entire time that he: (a) took 26 illicit cash in bathrooms from a businessperson seeking to buy 27 influence; (b) enjoyed luxury benefits as a public official and hid 28 them on his Form 700; (c) lied to the FBI, repeatedly; and (d)

1 obstructed justice by endeavoring to tamper with a witness,
2 repeatedly. In addition, the quantitative nature of defendant's 3 conduct here strongly supports the need for strong specific 4 deterrence, especially when compared to other defendants who engaged 5 in just a single act of criminality. That is, when defendant first 6 elected to sit down for an interview, his criminal defense lawyer by 7 his side, with the FBI and USAO who were conducting a pay-to-play
8 corruption investigation into the City, defendant had plenty of time
9 to think about exactly what he would do. He also had plenty of time 10 to realize he was in serious trouble. Defendant knew this because he 11 had very recently received a series of illicit gifts from 12 Businessperson A. Yet, during this extensive interview, defendant 13 did not break down, he did not confess, he did not express 14 accountability or suggest a hint of remorse. He did the opposite; he 15 lied and then he obstructed. This exact scenario played itself out 16 again in February 2018, except now defendant knew he was in even 17 deeper trouble because he had committed new criminal conduct with his 18 lies and obstruction. Yet, instead of being deterred from additional 19 crimes, defendant doubled down on the lies and doubled down on the 20 obstruction. Tellingly, this scenario repeated itself for a third 21 time in December 2018 as defendant futilely hoped that his abrupt 22 exit from public service to the greener pastures of private practice 23 would also hasten his escape from this investigation's focus. As a 24 result, his conduct got more brazen and more resolute; and it 25 resulted in more lies and more obstruction. Analyzed under the 26 timeline of defendant's continuing and escalating conduct, a 27 significant term of imprisonment is necessary to specifically deter 28 defendant from future criminal conduct and lies.

1           C.     Need to reflect the seriousness of the offense, to promote 2                   respect for the law, and to provide just punishment for the 3                   offense

4           In reaching an appropriate sentence, this Court must consider 5           "the seriousness of the offense and its harm to the reputation of 6           honest public servants and the public faith in legitimate state 7           government." Morgan, 635 F. App'x 423, 448. In considering "the 8           need for the sentence imposed to promote respect for the law and to 9           provide just punishment for the offense," a sentence of probation 10          would be "grossly inappropriate" in this case. Id. at 451. Congress 11          has recognized that in major white-collar cases, probation has been 12          granted "without due consideration being given to the fact that the 13          heightened deterrent effect of incarceration and the readily 14          perceivable receipt of just punishment accorded by incarceration were 15          of critical importance." S.Rep. No. 98-225, at 91-92 (1983), 16          reprinted in 1984 U.S.C.C.A.N. 3182, 3274-75.

17          A scheme to deceive federal investigators investigating you and 18          others for significant misconduct is a serious crime that shows a 19          lack of respect for the law, a lack of respect for law enforcement, 20          and warrants meaningful punishment. It is essential that witnesses 21          provide truthful statements if they choose to provide any statement
22          at all. Lying to investigators helps other criminals go unpunished 23          (not just the person who lies), risks incriminating innocent people, 24          significantly increases the taxpayer-funded expense of 25          investigations, and diverts government resources away from other 26          important matters. Here, defendant was aware that the federal 27          government was investigating benefits provided by a businessperson to 28          multiple public officials, including defendant himself. Defendant knew that agents were interviewing multiple witnesses in this

1 corruption probe. As the USPO recognized, defendant's conduct was 2 "wholly unbecoming [of] a public official" and "undermined the 3 public's trust." (PSR Ltr. at p. 3.) By lying to the FBI and 4 attempting to tamper with a witness in a federal corruption 5 investigation, not only did defendant violate his oath of office, he 6 violated the trust of his electorate. The entire public suffers as a 7 result. Just punishment demands a significant period of 8 incarceration.

9 D. History and characteristics of the defendant are both 10 aggravating and mitigating

11 As the USPO points out, defendant has been married for several 12 decades to a "supportive and empathetic spouse," has a close 13 relationship with his children, has a "wide variety of positive 14 influences in his life," and is "well supported by his friends and 15 family, who have rallied around him during this difficult time" as 16 have "community members and associates." (PSR Ltr. at p. 3.) The 17 government agrees that defendant, now 50, has commendably overcome a 18 "difficult and traumatic" upbringing and impressively rose to the 19 level of an elected City Councilmember, a reserve member of the LAPD, 20 and a County supervisor candidate. He then parlayed that to a 21 lucrative career in private practice. Defendant has no criminal 22 convictions apart from the instant conviction.

23 However, based on the limited analysis provided in its letter, 24 the USPO's recommendation of a probationary sentence seems to rely in 25 large part on defendant's public official status and standing in the 26 community and the collateral consequences facing such a defendant.
27 See PSR Ltr. at p. 3 (noting that defendant's "arrest and conviction 28 have been very public and that he has suffered these additional

1 humiliations"). Courts have repeatedly made clear that this type of 2 disparate treatment favoring certain classes of defendants is 3 improper. "[I]t is impermissible for a court to impose a lighter
 4 sentence on white-collar defendants than on blue-collar defendants 5 because it reasons that white-collar offenders suffer greater 6 reputational harm or have more to lose by conviction." United States
 7 v. Prosperi, 686 F.3d 32, 47 (1st Cir. 2012); see also 28 U.S.C.
 8 § 994(d) (requiring sentencing guidelines to be "entirely neutral as 9 to ... socioeconomic status of offenders); U.S.S.G. §§ 5H1.2 10 ("[e]ducation and vocational skills are not ordinarily relevant in 11 determining whether a departure is warranted"), 5H1.5 ("[e]mployment 12 record is not ordinarily relevant in determining whether a departure 13 is warranted"), 5H1.10 (socio-economic status is "not relevant in the 14 determination of a sentence"). Collateral consequences "related to a 15 defendant's humiliation before his community, neighbors, and friends 16 would tend to support shorter sentences in cases with defendants from 17 privileged backgrounds, who might have more to lose along these 18 lines. And '[w]e do not believe criminals with privileged backgrounds 19 are more entitled to leniency than those who have nothing left to 20 lose.'" United States v. Bistline, 665 F.3d 758, 760 (6th Cir. 2012) 21 (citation omitted).

22 The USPO also points out that defendant "has lived comfortably" 23 and will likely have "difficulty generating the type of income he was 24 used to earning." (PSR Ltr. at p. 3.) Once again, relying on this 25 type of purported mitigating factor to recommend the lowest possible 26 sentence is improper. Individuals, like defendant, who have earned 27 significant levels of professional success and thus are able "to make 28 a decent living without resorting to crime are more rather than less

1 culpable than their desperately poor and deprived brethren in crime."
2 United States v. Stefonek, 179 F.3d 1030, 1038 (7th Cir. 1999); see 3 also United States v. Kuhlman, 711 F.3d 1321, 1329 (11th Cir. 2013)
4 ("The Sentencing Guidelines authorize no special sentencing discounts 5 on account of economic or social status.").

6 Particularly given defendant's extensive aggravating conduct
7 here, defendant's personal status and characteristics do not warrant 8 the special type of treatment recommended by the USPO. Moreover, the 9 USPO's analysis views them through an exclusively mitigating lens.
10 As a result, its analysis skews in favor of defendant without 11 considering the equally and in some cases more compelling view that 12 certain of defendant's personal characteristics also contain an 13 aggravating quality. The government avers a more evenhanded analysis 14 of these factors supports the government's recommended sentence.

15 1. Defendant had many choices; he chose poorly many times

16 Defendant is privileged to have family and community support; he 17 does not appear to have mental health or substance abuse problems.
18 These are positive facts. The combination of these advantages also 19 make him unlike many of the defendants that come before this Court 20 who have committed crimes, at least in part, owed to one or more of 21 these factors. For those defendants, such factors do not exonerate 22 but certainly may mitigate their criminal conduct. By contrast, 23 consideration of these factors makes defendant's criminal conduct 24 here all the more inexcusable. He had a choice. In fact, he had 25 many choices. This is not the case of a defendant driven to drug 26 sales because he grew up in a drug house and so drug selling became 27 the only tangible skill he achieved as a result. This is not the 28 case of a defendant driven to aberrant criminal behavior due to a

1 spiraling addiction. Nor is it the case of a defendant driven to 2 crime because he was abandoned by society at the time of his conduct.
3 Defendant was not suffering from the onset of any mental ailments 4 each time he took a luxurious benefit then deliberately hid it on his 5 Form 700, or each time he lied to the federal government about his 6 conduct, or each time he attempted to corrupt the testimony of a key 7 witness to his wrongful actions. Properly evaluated through this 8 framework, defendant's personal status during the period of his 9 conduct in this case is an aggravating factor.

10 2. Community support for a public official involved in a 11 corruption related offense is of limited mitigation 12 value

13 Politicians convicted of offenses still often maintain a cadre 14 of support from long-time colleagues and/or constituents who, while 15 not seeking to minimize the criminal conduct, seek to highlight their 16 personal view of defendant's laudatory accomplishments; but their 17 import at sentencing should not be overstated. See United States v.
18 Vrdolyak, 593 F.3d 676, 683 (7th Cir. 2010) ("Politicians are in the 19 business of dispensing favors; and while gratitude like charity is a 20 virtue, expressions of gratitude by beneficiaries of politicians' 21 largesse should not weigh in sentencing."). Defendant's ability to 22 gather many letters of support, including from prominent individuals 23 in the community, is "certainly impressive but not surprising....
24 One does not become [an elected City Councilmember and Council] 25 President Pro Tem without the confidence of many supporters, some 26 quite influential. The letters must be viewed in that light."
27 Morgan, 635 F. App'x at 450.

1           3.     Defendant's prompt guilty plea is a mitigating factor

2           A true mitigating factor is defendant's prompt guilty plea in 3 this case and his related expressions of remorse. Defendant did not 4 engage in frivolous litigation. Instead, he quickly and clearly 5 communicated, through counsel, an interest in rapidly resolving his 6 case; and he then did so, pandemic notwithstanding. Where a public 7 official publically and promptly concedes to the correct result, it 8 meaningfully serves the public by providing finality and clarity. In 9 consideration of this factor along with learning of defendant's 10 upbringing through defense counsel and the PSR, the government in 11 fact reduced its originally intended recommended sentence of 36
12 months to the current recommendation of 24 months.<sup>7</sup>

13           E.     A lenient sentence will necessarily create unwarranted 14           sentencing disparities with less-culpable defendants who do 15           not enjoy the same status as defendant

16           The USPO argues that a "custodial term would be aberrant for 17 other defendants facing a similar guideline range with a background 18 like Englander's." (PSR Ltr. at p. 3.) It is unclear what the basis 19 for this conclusion is, but, in any event, the facts and law show it 20 is deeply flawed. The Guidelines make clear that the imposed 21 sentence for each individual defendant must reflect the sometimes 22 vastly disparate ways different defendants may commit the same crime.
23 The range is a range for a reason. Where there are aggravating 24 factors for a defendant and his conduct, the court should increase 25 the sentence within or above that range to a degree rooted in the 26 court's analysis of the § 3553(a) and guideline factors. Calling a

---

27           <sup>7</sup> Defendant's plea agreement allows the government to recommend 28 a sentence up to 60 months' custody and, as stated above, defendant agreed to an appellate waiver of 36 months' imprisonment. (CR 24 ¶ 14.)

1 custodial term for the undisputed factual scenario here "aberrant" is 2 irreconcilable with these facts and rejected by the proper weighing 3 of the statutory factors, as set forth above. Quite to the contrary, 4 compare sentencing: (a) a wealthy and powerful former City councilman 5 for criminal conduct stemming from (b) his repeated acceptance of 6 illicit benefits spanning the gamut of stereotypical corruption, (c)
7 his repeated material lies to the federal government investigating 8 his conduct over a significant period of time, and (d) his extensive 9 and multiple efforts at obstruction of a key witness to the exact 10 same term as a private citizen who, on a single federal form, falsely 11 checked one box is the height of unwarranted sentencing disparity.
12 Yet this is precisely the grossly inequitable treatment that would be 13 occasioned by a probationary sentence here.

14 "Congress's primary goal in enacting [18 U.S.C.] § 3553(a)(6) 15 was to promote national uniformity in sentencing." United States v.
16 Saeteurn, 504 F.3d 1175, 1181 (9th Cir. 2007) (citation omitted).
17 Data available from the United States Sentencing Commission for 18 fiscal year 2019 for 97 nationwide cases shows that the average
19 imprisonment length for defendants sentenced under U.S.S.G. § 2J1.2
20 with Criminal History Category I was 17 months. See United States 21 Sentencing Commission Interactive Data Analyzer, available at 22 <https://ida.ussc.gov/analytics/saw.dll?Dashboard>. Using the more 23 general fraud based U.S.S.G. § 2B1.1, data for fiscal year 2019 for 24 3,977 nationwide cases shows an average imprisonment length of 27 25 months. In addition, a custodial sentence of 24 months in custody is 26 consistent with comparable sentences for other false statement cases 27
28

1 by public officials recently imposed in this district.<sup>8</sup>

2 V. CONCLUSION

3 For the foregoing reasons, the government respectfully requests 4 that the Court impose the following sentence: 24 months of 5 imprisonment, followed by three years of supervised release, a 6 $45,500 fine, 300 hours of community service, and a special 7 assessment of $100.

---

24 <sup>8</sup> See, e.g., United States v. Leroy Baca, Case No. 16-CR-66(A)- 25 PA (defendant, former sheriff of the Los Angeles Sheriff's 26 Department, sentenced to 36 months in custody after jury trial 27 conviction on one count of conspiracy in violation of 18 U.S.C.
28 § 371, one count of making false statements in violation of 18 U.S.C.
§ 1001, and one count of obstruction of justice in violation of 18
U.S.C. § 1503); United States v. Byron Dredd, Case No. 15-CR-569-DSF (defendant, former Los Angeles Sheriff's Department deputy, sentenced to 12 months in custody after jury trial conviction on one count of making false statements in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1001).